Textbook of Immunopharmacology
Edited by M. Maureen Dale MB, ChB, PhD and J.C. Foreman PhD, MB, BS, both of the Department of Pharmacology, University College, London

This textbook covers the mechanisms involved in the formation, release and subsequent actions of the chemical mediators of inflammatory and immune reactions. The book emphasises the roles of the cells involved — mast cells, neutrophils, eosinophils, macrophages, lymphocytes and platelets. Histamine release from the mast cell is taken as a model system of mediator release. The main local and systemic phenomena of inflammation are dealt with — the vascular events, chemotaxis and cell accumulation, fever and the increase in numbers of white cells in the blood. In the final section drugs which modify inflammatory and immune responses are considered.

Outline of Contents: Introduction to immunopharmacology; The cells involved; The mediators; The phenomena of inflammation; Drug manipulation of inflammatory and immune response.

1984. 424 pages, 92 illustrations. £18.50

Lecture Notes on Clinical Pharmacology
J.L. Reid DM, FRCP; P.C. Rubin DM, MRCP and B. Whiting MD, FRCP

This popular member of the Lecture Notes series presents important principles of clinical pharmacology for undergraduate and postgraduate medical students by emphasizing current therapeutic practice. Important contemporary areas such as drug level monitoring, drugs in pregnancy and drugs in the elderly are discussed in the introductory chapters, and the rapidly growing sub-specialties such as oncology and anti-arrhythmic therapy are also covered.

Contents: Principles of drug absorption, distribution and elimination; Influence of disease on drug action and disposition; Clinical pharmacology at the extremes of age; Drugs in pregnancy; Clinical pharmacokinetics; Cardiovascular pharmacology; Antimicrobial therapy; Drugs influencing airflow obstruction; Anti-inflammatory drugs; Pharmacological suppression of cell growth; Steroids; Pharmacology of the reproductive system; Gastrointestinal disorders; Drugs and the blood forming tissues; Anaesthesia and the relief of severe pain; Neuropharmacology; Drugs and the endocrine system; Self poisoning; Use and misuse of commonly used drugs; The evolution of a new drug; Adverse drug reactions and post-marketing surveillance; Drugs and the law; Compliance with drug therapy; Therapeutic decision making.

Adsorption Science & Technology publishes original research papers, correspondence and critical review articles relating to adsorption and desorption phenomena. Original papers are welcomed dealing with adsorption theory, measurements and techniques at gas–solid, liquid–solid and liquid–gas interfaces. The journal emphasizes links between developments in these sciences and their practical and industrial applications, for example in corrosion processes, catalysis, solvent recycling, tribology, dyeing, enhanced oil recovery, and pollution control.

Subscription Information
Adsorption Science & Technology is published quarterly. Subscription rates for 1985 are £54.00 (UK), US $125.00 (USA and Canada), £65.00 (elsewhere) post free.

Journal of Clinical and Hospital Pharmacy

The journal for reports and reviews of significant developments in pharmacy

Editor
Dr A. Li Wan Po Department of Pharmacy, University of Aston, Gosta Green, Birmingham B4 7ET, England

First published in 1976, the Journal of Clinical and Hospital Pharmacy has become internationally established among pharmacists in various disciplines and areas of specialization as a forum for communication of significant developments in clinical and hospital pharmacy. Its scope includes:— manufacture, quality control and formulation of medicines, drug information services, pharmacokinetics, radiopharmacy, organization and management of the hospital pharmacy, drug distribution systems and clinical pharmacy education. This journal has been adopted as the official organ for the publication of the scientific work of the European Society of Clinical Pharmacy.

Subscription Information
Journal of Clinical and Hospital Pharmacy is published quarterly. Subscription rates for 1985 are £59.00 (UK), $117.00 (USA & Canada), £71.00 (elsewhere) post free.
